REPAINTING SHIPPING CONTAINERS

This guide aims to give an overview on shipping container repainting. If supplying a container we will offer a repaint in your yard before delivery.

WHY PAINT SHIPPING CONTAINERS?

Painting adds an extra level of protection between the steel and the elements, which will slow down any corrosion and improve the lifespan of the container. A good coat of quality paint will also improve the appearance of the container, especially important if on view to your visitors and customer.

USED SHIPPING CONTAINERS have typically been around the world a few times over their 10-15-year lifespan, and paint can fade, flake or be scraped and scratched by the machinery that handles them. Most used containers will have a lot of surface rust and dents, dinks and scrapes. We guarantee they are structurally sound and wind and watertight, however cosmetics cannot be guaranteed on these units. Painting improves the overall appearance of the container, and a wide range of shades are available. Most colors are at standard price; however, some florescent, metallic and pearlescent paints will be more expensive.

WHAT IS ASBESTOS

Asbestos is a naturally occurring mineral containing strong, tiny fibres useful for many applications. It was commonly used for electrical and building insulation by manufacturers in the 19th century as it helped to absorb sound, resist heat, electrical and chemical damage, and was above all, affordable.

Asbestos was a very effective material, but is now outlawed because it brings about serious health problems to those who had long exposure to it. This long exposure caused many serious illnesses and diseases like lung cancer, mesothelioma and asbestosis. This caused asbestos to be banned in many countries. However, many buildings were not stripped of the fibre and still require asbestos removal today.

The dangers of asbestos are well known and highly publicised throughout South Africa and the rest of the world. Don't risk the safety of your family, friends or work colleagues by attempting to handle this dangerous material yourself
